SIMS
helping schools inspire

Thinking of working in a school?

Want to know more about SIMS?

SIMS training is designed to help schools harness their data and drive improved teaching and learning. We've recently seen an increase in the number of training requests from individuals not currently employed in a school, who are actively seeking employment within education. With over 21,000 schools using SIMS, it seems an understanding of SIMS is advantageous.

How we can help you?

As a 'non-school delegate' interested in gaining employment within a school, we can provide you with an entry-level understanding of how to use SIMS to complete various daily tasks. Please note however, this training cannot guarantee employment within a school.

Upon completion of a SIMS training course you will receive a certificate as proof of attendance, along with a training manual for your reference. To help get you started we thought you might be interested in the following courses:

An Introduction to SIMS
This 90 minute remote course is the perfect introduction to SIMS, providing an overview of each SIMS module. Find out more

SIMS Office User
This one day course is designed for new users of the SIMS software, with a focus on administration and runs in various locations across the UK. Find out more

FMS courses
These one day FMS courses are ideal for delegates interested in working in a financial capacity within a school. Find out more about FMS Daily Tasks or FMS Financial Management.

For more information on training as a non-school delegate, contact the training team on: 0844 893 9000

*Calls to 0844/0845 numbers will cost three pence per minute, plus your phone company's access charge.